Comments and Recommendations from two Independent Experts*Proposal n° 100-A1&2-2004Expert 1

The structure of the curriculum is very well prepared and coherent, the roles of the consortium partners are well designed. The project objectives are clearly stated and based on a long-lasting experience. They respond to the needs of research and education in the relevant discipline. A job-oriented approach has been demonstrated beyond doubt which contributes much to the quality of the course.

While it can be by no means a factor diminishing the excellent standard of the proposal it should be noted that the geographical composition of the consortium reflects the composition of European Communities of 1972.

This is a meticulously presented and entirely convincing proposal based on a course which has been running successfully for more than a decade and which is eminently suitable to represent the excellence of European education in the field.

It is able to draw on the consortium's experience and the success of its graduates in presenting its case which is buttressed by evidence of sound governance and procedures and established worldwide networks.
